

Healthy NewsWorks

Building health awareness through student-written media

Your contribution to Healthy NewsWorks supports a community organization that in 2017–18 will teach more than 500 elementary and middle school students how to gather facts and use them to deliver health information. Their words will reach some 6,000 children in high-needs schools in the Philadelphia area.

Here are some examples of what your gift can accomplish

$2,500—Fund a school newspaper program for 3 months including classroom lessons and activities related to research, writing, and health.

$1,000—Develop and supply classroom reporting kits, including notebooks, research tools, and other materials, for 20 students.

$500—Create student handouts and teacher lesson for 1 special health reporting topic.

$250—Transport 25 students on a health reporting field trip.

$150—Print and distribute 1 four-page newspaper issue for 600 students.

$50—Supply notebooks, story starters, and other materials to help 1 student serve as a health reporter.

Healthy NewsWorks will recognize all gifts of $25 or more. Please tell us below how you would like to be listed.
